The University of Florida’s in-house Master of Arts in Mass Communication specialization in International/Intercultural Communication focuses on the interactions between people of different cultures, values and histories. Through their study, students learn to appreciate and engage diverse cultures and media while gaining the knowledge and skills needed to thrive in today’s global community.

Among the program’s many benefits:

• Learn about international journalism, business and marketing communication while discovering new cultures.
• Become proficient in a language other than English.
• Graduates of the program have gone on to work in U.S. and international media organizations, multinational corporations, international agencies, and others.

Students can begin the master’s degree in the Fall or Spring terms. Courses include: International Public Relations; Intercultural Communication; International Communication; Race, Class, Gender and Media; and others.
Admissions

Minimum Requirements for Acceptance
• Applicants must have a bachelor’s degree
• Two years of relevant professional communications experience
• An undergraduate GPA of 3.0 or better
• GRE

The Graduate School, University of Florida, requires both a minimum grade average of 3.0 for all upper-division undergraduate work and a minimum verbal-quantitative total score on the General Test of the Graduate Record Examination. Applicants are expected to have received a minimum grade average of 3.0 for all core courses within the Journalism and Mass Communications area and their area of special interest.

Admission is determined by several factors beyond the application material including space availability, and supervisory availability particularly in specialized areas. Meeting the minimum application requirements does not guarantee acceptance.

Test score requirements: The program typically admits students with a 550/156 verbal and a 550/146 quantitative GRE score. The TOEFL requirements are 550 paper–based and 80 internet–based, and the IELTS requirement is 6.

Tuition

Tuition and fees are determined by the University of Florida for in-state and out-of-state graduate students.
