Objective: In this course you will examine the roles and effects of contemporary mass media on society. Course objectives include increasing media literacy through examination of the history of various mass media. In this course you will consider the rights, responsibilities and ethics of media. You will explore the relationship between governments, audiences and media companies as well as the economic, political and social determinates of media content.

Required reading: The required text for this course is "Media and Culture: Mass Communication in a Digital Age," 10th Edition.

Tests: You will have two tests, both multiple choice, one in the middle of the semester, the other near the end. Both will be during regular class time in our usual classroom, 100 McCarty C. Show up for class, listen, read and take notes and you should have no problems. It's that simple. Really. (A note about taking notes: We encourage you to take notes the way a journalist would, which means listen for what sounds important, such as names, facts, numbers and anything preceded by the words, "This is important so write it down.")

Finally, a note about your final grade for the class. We use the university's alternate grading scale, which is extremely generous and forgiving (see below). When the end of the semester comes, please don't send us emails saying things like, "But professor, I'm only one point away from an A. Can't you just give me one point??" Receiving one of these emails will tempt us to be jerks to you. We hate jerks. Please don't make us hate ourselves.
