

MMC 5206

Advanced Law of Mass Communications
College of Journalism and Mass Communications
University of Florida
Fall 2018

Professor Sandra F. Chance

Course Schedule: Wed. – 6-8th period (12:50-3:50 p.m.)

Office: 3068 Weimer Hall

Phone: 392-3995

E-Mail: schance@jou.ufl.edu

Office Hrs:

Wednesday – 10:30-11:30 a.m. and 4-5 p.m.

Available by appointment, too.

Welcome to MMC 5206-Advanced Law of Mass Communications. We are trying something new and have combined an “honors” section of the undergraduate MMC 4200-Law of Mass Communications with this class in order to provide a more challenging learning environment and additional educational opportunities.

This course focuses on the First Amendment and the federal and state laws that most directly affect mass communication in the United States. The course will serve as a “survival kit” for students by helping you understand and deal with the many legal questions and issues faced by media professionals in disseminating news and information to the public. You will acquire practical knowledge and learn legal principles and methods of analysis necessary for professional communicators. This course is specifically designed to cover the essential legal issues for all of the majors within this college.

Through a combination of lectures, class discussions and other resource materials, you will study the laws governing the media, analyze legal cases and problems and gain practical skills. We’ll begin with an overview of the legal system, including the sources of law, the structure of the state and federal court system and the importance of legal precedence. Whenever possible and appropriate, we’ll look at the different ways freedom of expression is protected or restricted around the world.

We’ll examine the First Amendment, what it means and why it’s important not only to members of the media, but to all citizens. Following this overview, we’ll focus on freedom of expression and the issue of censorship. We’ll also study defamation, sometimes known as libel, and privacy, the right to be let alone.

We’ll also discuss First Amendment protections for political and commercial speech and the laws of copyright. We’ll be looking at the new rules and regulations governing the Internet and the issues of indecency and obscenity.

In the final few weeks of the semester, we’ll learn about restrictions on court reporting and journalists’ confidentiality, and the potential conflict between a free press and a fair trial. Finally, we’ll cover access to government documents and meetings.

TEXT:

Middleton, Kent R. and Lee, William E., Stewart, Daxton R.; The Law of Public Communication, Tenth Edition. This text is required. There are older editions available, but buy this one. It's the most up-to-date and includes information that we will be discussing and you will be tested on.

Course Content:

Advanced Law of Mass Communication is a graduate level survey course. We'll be focusing on media law and its impact on the various media professions. We'll study the laws governing the media and analyze legal cases and problems. You must have a basic understanding of American government and the American legal system.

During the first part of the semester we'll examine the First Amendment, what it means and why it's important not only to members of the media, but to all citizens. Following this overview, we'll focus on freedom of expression and the issue of censorship.

Next we'll study the areas of defamation, privacy, copyright and corporate speech and advertising. We'll also examine the law and regulations affecting the broadcasting and cable industries.

Finally, we'll learn about access to government documents and meetings, the constitutional protections for newsgathering, as well as fair trial and free press issues. Time permitting, we'll also look at the constitutional protections afforded sexually explicit, or obscene speech and the ability of journalists to protect confidential sources.

Course Objectives: By the end of the semester, you will:

- (1) understand the many legal questions and issues faced by media professionals in disseminating news and information to the public.
- (2) understand how to do basic legal research, write a case brief and analyze legal issues and problems you will face as media professionals.
- (3) understand the legal issues surrounding new technologies, including the new Telecommunications Act, the Communications Decency Act and the Child Online Protection Act.
- (4) be knowledgeable about legal resources on the Internet and how to use Lexis/Nexis databases for effective legal research.
- (5) be able to read and write a legal-based research paper.

How Will We Do This?

You'll be assigned readings in the texts, legal opinions and other relevant outside readings. With the knowledge you've gleaned from the readings, you'll have an opportunity to engage in class discussion and expand your critical thinking skills and ability to critically analyze and problem-solve.

Ultimately, you'll learn how to read a case opinion, where to find cases, how to analyze cases, and why these cases are important. You'll use the skills you've learned to understand and analyze critical legal issues facing the communications industry.

How Grades Will Be Determined:

My grading policy: Grades in this course are awarded solely on the basis of your performance. No credit or grades will be awarded based on need or on your status as a graduate student. (Translation: No guaranteed grades. You can earn and will receive a C, D or E if you fail to meet the course requirements.)

Grades will be based on a combination of written assignments, in-class participation and presentations, and written examinations.

Details:

Class preparation and participation: These grades will be based on quality (NOT quantity) of class discussion, case briefs, and other class preparatory assignments. If you are tardy three times (more than 10 minutes late), this will count as one hour of missed class. If you miss 3 hours of class, your class participation will go down one letter grade. If you miss six hours of class, your grade will go down two letter grades. If you miss more than six hours of class, your class participation grade will be an E.

Discussion/Position Papers: These papers will be limited to 6-12 typed, double-spaced pages. You will be required to read and analyze cases and apply your understanding of the appropriate law and legal precedents discussed in the texts and in class to a hypothetical. You need to outline the legal arguments the parties will likely present, explain the legal reasoning the court will engage in, based on assigned court decisions. Finally, take the position you believe the court deciding this case should follow. Most importantly, explain and support your position fully. An important part of this assignment will be the extent to which you demonstrate your ability to engage in critical analysis and thinking. You'll also be graded on your understanding of and use of your legal research skills to bring in additional and relevant legal information to your discussion. While I will not expect you to master the Blue Book style of footnoting, I will expect you to begin to understand and use it.

Discussion Leader: Each student will be assigned to lead class discussions this semester. Discussion leaders will be expected to be the experts on these subjects during the class discussions. Students must turn in copies of preparatory materials, including overheads and handouts to instructor at the beginning of the discussion session. If you are absent on the day you are leading the discussion, you will receive a 0 for that assignment.

Final Project/Final Paper:

The options for the final project will be determined by the number of students in the class. I'll explain the project at the mid-point of the semester. You will have a choice between the project and a major research paper.

Discussion Leader: Each student will be assigned to lead class discussions this semester. Discussion leaders will be expected to be the experts on these subjects during the class discussions. Students must turn in copies of preparatory materials, including overheads and handouts to instructor at the beginning of the discussion session. If you are absent on the day you are leading the discussion, you will receive a 0 for that assignment.

Final Project/Final Paper/Written Examination

Again, depending on the background and interests of the members of the class, I will assign a final project/paper or schedule a written exam.

Class Web Site:

In order to better serve you, answer questions, provide class information and additional study aids, I have established a Canvas class web site. You'll need to pull down the complete syllabus from the website as soon it's available.

Attendance:

This is a small discussion class. Your attendance is vital to your success and to our class discussion. If you are tardy three times (more than 10 minutes late), this will count as one hour of missed class. If you miss 3 hours of class, your class participation will go down one letter grade. If you miss six hours of class, your grade will go down two letter grades. If you miss more than six hours of class, your class participation grade will be an E.

Requirements for class attendance and make-up exams, assignments, and other work in this course are consistent with university policies that can be found in the online catalog at:

Finally, if you must miss class, it is your responsibility to pick up any handouts, check with classmates to see what was covered and make-up any work you may have missed.

About Your Professor:

This is my 26th year as a faculty member at the University of Florida's College of Journalism and Communications. I joined the faculty in 1993, after practicing media law with the one of the country's largest law firms, Holland & Knight. I was honored as the 1997 College of Journalism and Communications' Teacher of the Year and received a TIP award for teaching excellence in 1998. I was named the 2004 National Journalism Teacher of the Year by the Scripps Howard Foundation. The award is co-sponsored by the Freedom Forum, the Knight Foundation and the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication.

I earned my law degree from the University of Florida with honors in 1990, and was chosen Order of the Coif. I earned my Master's Degree with distinction in 1985 from UF's College of Journalism and Communications, and my B.S. degree with high honors from UF's College of Journalism and Communications in 1975. In addition, I have 15 years of corporate communications experience. I am on the board of the First Amendment Foundation and Sunshine Chair for the Society of Professional Journalists. I've served on the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication's national Board of Directors and chaired the national Professional Freedom and Responsibility Committee. I am an active member of the Florida Bar's Media and Communications Law Committee and the American Bar Association's Communications Forum. I am admitted to practice before several federal district and appellate courts, as well as with the U.S. Supreme Court.

I have been invited by the U.S. State Department to present FOI seminars in Brazil, Jamaica, China and Columbia and have been asked by the Mozambique government to review their press law.

I have published research in the University of North Carolina's First Amendment Law Review, Fordham Intellectual Property, Media and Entertainment Law Review, the Communications Law and Policy journal, the Florida State Law Review, the Journal of Law and Public Policy, the Journal of Broadcasting and Electronic Media, Journalism Educator, UALR Law Review, the International Journal of Technology, Knowledge and Society and Journalism Studies, presented numerous conference papers, written 20 book chapters, Journal of Communications and Mass Communication Quarterly, Quill, Editor & Publisher, The Gainesville Sun, The Sun-Sentinel and The Palm Beach Post.

I work with graduate students in a number of ways, including supervising teaching and research assistantships, and have supervised theses and dissertations. I am happy to discuss thesis and dissertation ideas with you.

Access to Your Professor:

My office is located on the third floor, Room 3068. If you would like to discuss anything about this course, a career as a media lawyer, admission to law schools, media-related professional career choices, or personal views and questions, please feel free to come by. I will be available to talk to you during my office hours. If these times are not convenient, stop by and we can set something else up. I'm looking forward to getting to know you.

If there is an emergency or a problem that can be handled quickly, I will generally be available to help at almost any time you can catch me in my office or the building.

Directions for E-Learning System:

This course will rely on the tools and communication devices available through UF's Canvas System. For help or questions regarding your Gatorlink account, please visit <http://gatorlink.ufl.edu/>.

My Position on Academic Honesty:

Academic honesty and integrity are fundamental values of the university community. Students who enroll at the university commit to holding themselves and their peers to the high standard of honor required by the Honor Code. Any individual who becomes aware of a violation of the Honor Code is bound by honor to take corrective action.

No work required or prepared for this class may be submitted for credit in another class. Likewise, no material prepared for any other class will be accepted for credit in this class.

In addition, the following requirements from the Master's Handbook are effective in this class.

All graduate students in the College of Journalism and Communications are expected to conduct themselves with the highest degree of integrity. It is the students' responsibility to ensure that they know and understand the requirements of every assignment. At a minimum, this includes avoiding the following:

Plagiarism: Plagiarism occurs when an individual presents the ideas or expressions of another as his or her own. Students must always credit others' ideas with accurate citations and must use quotation marks and citations when presenting the words of others. A thorough understanding of plagiarism is a precondition for admittance to graduate studies in the college.

Cheating: Cheating occurs when a student circumvents or ignores the rules that govern an academic assignment such as an exam or class paper. It can include using notes, in physical or electronic form, in an exam, submitting the work of another as one's own, or reusing a paper a student has composed for one class in another class. If a student is not sure about the rules that govern an assignment, it is the student's responsibility to ask for clarification from his instructor.

Research integrity: The integrity of data in mass communication research is a paramount issue for advancing knowledge and the credibility of our professions.

For this reason any intentional misrepresentation of data, or misrepresentation of the conditions or circumstances of data collection, is considered a violation of academic integrity.

Misrepresenting data reported in a thesis or dissertation is a clear violation of the rules and requirements of academic integrity and honesty.

Any violation of the above stated conditions is grounds for immediate dismissal from the program and will result in revocation of the degree if the degree previously has been awarded.

By your continued presence in the class, you agree to abide by the College's and my positions on academic honesty and agree to be bound by the University's Honor Code, which reads: "We, the members of the University of Florida community, pledge to hold ourselves and our peers to the highest standards of honesty and integrity. On all work submitted for credit by students at the University of Florida, the following pledge is either required or implied. 'On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid in doing this assignment.'"

If you are aware of plagiarism, cheating, or questionable research integrity, please contact me immediately and proper action will be taken.

Students with Disabilities:

The Office of Student Services had indicated that students with disabilities should contact their instructors at the beginning of the term. Individual arrangements will be made through that office to provide special services required to deal with problems arising from disabilities. Hearing or vision impairment and other disabilities should be called to the instructor's attention.

My Expectations:

To avoid any misunderstandings, let me state a few obvious guidelines for class and class assignments. This information is intended to inform you fully of my expectations and avoid problems later in the semester.

Attendance: You are graduate students and I expect you to be ON TIME, PREPARED and PARTICIPATE in class discussion. Participate in an informed, intelligent way. Express yourself thoughtfully and respect your peers.

Obviously, if you are not in class, your class participation and preparation grades will be dramatically affected. (See earlier discussion.)

You are responsible for all material covered in class. That means it's up to you to talk to your colleagues and get copies of handouts and notes. In addition, I will ask you (and usually without warning) to summarize and discuss the assigned readings. You will get an excused absence in the event of illness, serious family emergencies, and/or religious holidays. However, if you miss all or part of more than three (3) classes, you will fail the class. If you are more than 10 minutes late, you will be marked absent, even if you show up after that.

Finally, I reserve the right to adjust a final grade based on superlative class attendance and participation.

Quality of Submissions: Everything turned in MUST BE TYPED. Spelling, grammar and typographical errors will count against your grade. You must use footnotes, in The Bluebook style. If you are using a computer printer, you must insure the printing is legible. If I can't read it, I can't grade it. It must be in 12 pt. type, with 1-inch margins, double-spaced.

Method of Submissions: You MUST TURN IN ONE HARD COPY of your assignment by the deadline and one electronic copy. I cannot accept electronic submissions.

Deadlines: Papers must be turned in by the deadline. You will receive an automatic letter grade deduction for each day the assignment is late. I will not accept any assignment that is more than 48 hours late.

Important: Please consider the course requirements and the schedule now. Students often sign up for too many classes, commit to numerous outside activities, have difficult work schedules or need to be away for any number of reasons during the semester. PLEASE, DO NOT ask me for extensions or make-ups for these reasons. In fairness to all the students in the class, I cannot accommodate these requests.

So, give serious thought to these course requirements. I estimate that the class readings and assignments will probably take between 10 and 15 hours a week. If you cannot make the necessary time commitment this semester, we'll be offering the class again next year.

Your Responsibilities

1. Come to class, on time and prepared.
2. Read the assignments and think about what you've read and what it means.
3. Participate thoughtfully and respectfully in the class discussion.
4. Turn in written assignments on time.
5. Come see me at least once during the semester to "check in."
6. See me with any concerns or questions you have about this class, assignments or grades.

My Responsibilities

1. Establish a challenging, rewarding learning environment.
2. Be prepared to lead discussions. Involve everyone in the discussion, whenever possible.
3. Ensure high-quality learning opportunities by holding students accountable for participating in classroom dialogues.
4. Grade written assignments and give feedback and suggestions for improvements.
5. Meet with each of you at least once during the semester to "check in."
6. Answer any concerns or questions you have about this class, assignments or grades.

I take my responsibilities seriously.
I expect the same of you.

Best advice for doing well in MMC 5206: Keep up with the readings, use critical thinking skills, turn in assignments on time and participate fully in this educational process.

Informed Consent: By remaining in the class, you agree to meet the course expectations, requirements and deadlines.

Reservation of Rights: I reserve the right to change this syllabus depending on the make-up, participation and experience of the class.

Detailed reading assignments, will be available after the first class, once I've been able to evaluate class and student's particular interests.