“Of all affairs, communication is the most wonderful.” ~ John Dewey

“Communication is 'the most wonderful' because it is the basis of human fellowship; it produces the social bonds, bogus or not, that tie men together and make associated life possible. Society is possible because of the binding forces of shared information circulating in an organic system.” ~ John Carey

Course Description

MMC 6660 Mass Communication & Society is a graduate seminar at the University of Florida’s College of Journalism and Communications. This seminar will focus on Communication and The Problem of Knowledge. Through discussions, lectures, presentations, writing, and readings in history, media ecology, social theory, media sociology, and journalism and communications studies we will explore the interface between society’s acquisition of knowledge about our world and the act of communication burdened by such influences on content as public relations, advertising, our own cognitive biases, the “vast arsenal of truth deflection” and “the strategic use of hoaxes, lies, fake news and propaganda.”

Course Objectives

The purpose of this course is to give students in journalism, advertising, public relations, telecommunications, other mass communications fields, and anyone else interested in mass communications – and that should be everyone – the opportunity to explore issues in the interaction between mass communication institutions and society. The course is aimed at helping students to develop a critical perspective on mass media and acts of communication as they consider ways in which media institutions, media content, and our own cognitive biases disrupt the acquisition of knowledge and distort our constructions of reality.

Course Structure

1. This class involves an Active Reading of the required readings. Follow this concentrated, focused, and annotative method in all your reading this semester.
2. This course is a reading seminar built around informed discussion.
a. You are expected to participate in this class by submitting your essays, responding to others’ essays, offering your ideas about the subject in class, allowing other people to express their views, respecting others’ opinions, and exchanging ideas that will make us better readers and writers.

b. Seminar discussions require a fine balance. On the one hand, you do not want to take over the conversation. On the other, you do not want to let others do all the talking.

- Bring Work turned in late will not be accepted without a legitimate and documented excuse.
• Bring a laptop or tablet to class, but keep it closed unless we need it for class activity.
• Except where noted, all assignments or any other written work will be filed through Canvas – no exceptions. Log in to Canvas at http://lss.at.ufl.edu If you are unfamiliar with Canvas or have any questions, check out the e-Learning FAQs. If you encounter a problem, contact the Help Desk http://helpdesk.ufl.edu/.
• To dispute a grade, do so within 24 hours of when the grade was posted. After that, it is final.

Email Policy

1. All email will be sent through the Canvas system – no exceptions.
2. The email should include your full name and be as specific as possible
3. I check my email once in the morning and once in the evening Monday through Friday.
4. I do not read emails of more than half a screen long. Come talk to me.

Management Issues

Syllabus Changes: I reserve the right to alter, with notification, the syllabus as the need arises.

Accommodation for disabilities: Let me know immediately if you have a life issue that would hinder your work in this course. I will do my best to help you. Students requesting accommodation must register with the Disability Resource Center https://www.dso.ufl.edu/drc/.

Be Good: You need to conduct yourself in a courteous manner both in and out of class when it comes to dealing with fellow students or your instructor. That means any rude, obstructive or aggressive behavior will not be tolerated, and manifestations of same will mean your ouster from the class. The UF Counseling and Wellness Center (https://counseling.ufl.edu/) is located at 3190 Radio Road and the phone number for Appointments & After-Hour Assistance is 352-392-1575.

U Matter, We Care: If you or a friend is in distress, please contact umatter@ufl.edu so that the U Matter, We Care Team can reach out to the student in distress. A nighttime and weekend crisis counselor is available by phone at 352-392-1575.

CAVEAT: At times a class such as this will deal with controversial topics, so be warned words that may be considered offensive or ideological may be spoken in the context of subjects we are discussing. As a teacher I have no political or social agenda, so do not try to answer in a way you believe might comport with what I want to hear or read. Feel free to advocate any position as long as you remain respectful of others’ opinions, and always be able to defend your point of view.

Plagiarism and Academic Honesty

• It is your responsibility to make certain you understand what constitutes plagiarism and to ensure that you give proper credit any time you draw on someone else’s writing.
• Treat Internet sources like a print source.
• Make certain you always copy down citation information, even if you’re paraphrasing. When in doubt, always cite. If you have questions, ask me. There’s no penalty for asking questions, but the penalties for plagiarism are severe, including dismissal from the program.
• Also, do not turn in to me any work you previously have submitted to another instructor or that you plan to submit for any other class at UF or any other institution. If you want to write on a topic you have worked on before, that might be acceptable if you discuss it with me and get permission in advance.
• I will work under the assumption that you have read:

Assignments

Class Participation & Attendance

Participation: You are expected to participate meaningfully in discussions. Windy verbosity with no point and hushed passivity will not go unnoticed and will figure in your grade. This includes posting tweets to the class hash tag #MMC6660.

Grading Rubric:
1. You add significant, insightful content to discussion but do not dominate the conversation.
2. You speak from time to time, but look for more opportunities to add to our discussions.
3. Your perspective is important. I need to hear much more from you! 50 points

Attendance: You are expected to attend every class. You will receive a failing grade for missing 3 or more classes without a legitimate excuse. Excused absences include documented medical excuses and religious observances (with advance notice). University-approved absences must be documented (in advance, if for an approved university activity). 50 points

Weekly Quiz Warm-Up
Quiz followed by conversation. I will ask you to respond in writing (about one page) to a question I pose about the readings/screenings for the week and on any tweets using the #MMC6660 hash tag. 10 points each: Toted at end

Class Takeaways
Concisely express in assignment on Canvas in one full page at least two of the most significant (central, useful, meaningful, surprising, disturbing) things you have learned in class that day, in your readings, in my posts, or even elsewhere. Include anything you did not understand. Reveal your thinking, and avoid being superficial or perfunctory. If we have a screening fully respond to it as you would any other text. Also, always answer these three questions:

- How does something we discussed today connect to something you learned in another course?
- Have you had any personal experiences that connect to today’s subject?
- Have you ever encountered any of today’s material in a book, film, or television show?
Please note: If you are not in class, then you cannot post a Takeaway. Period.

(5 Points off if format not followed to the letter)

10 points each: Totaled at end
Due 11:55 p.m. Mondays

Deep-Think Reaction Essays

Two things here:

a. A Reaction Essay of at least three full pages dealing with all readings or screenings of the week.
b. At least two substantive responses to two other essays. Each week respond to someone new in class.

Your essay should not just summarize and describe the readings but instead reflect your deep thinking about the readings. Your essay should offer analysis and leap off from the readings into a brief discussion reflecting critical thinking and creative ruminations. Your essay should:

a. Be clear that you have read ALL the readings
b. Respond to any discussion points I list under the readings.

2. Include at least one substantive discussion question of no more than 100 words. This question cannot be perfunctory, overly broad, or unrelated to our class readings.

Format: This should be constructed as I have above. No. 1 for your essay and No. 2 for your question.

(5 Points off if format not followed to the letter)

Grading Rubric

| 10 points | Exceptional. The essay is focused and coherently integrates examples with explanations or analysis. The entry reflects in-depth engagement with the topic. |
| 7 to 9 points | Satisfactory. The essay is reasonably focused, and explanations or analysis are mostly based on examples or other evidence. Fewer connections are made between ideas, and though new insights are offered, they are not fully developed. The entry reflects moderate engagement with the topic. |
| 4 to 6 points | Underdeveloped. The essay is mostly description or summary, and contains few connections between ideas. The entry reflects passing engagement with the topic. |
| 3 points | Limited. The essay is unfocused, or simply rehashes previous comments, and displays no evidence of engagement with the topic. |
| 0 to 2 points | The essay is missing or consists of disconnected sentences. |

Points Off For

Inadequate response to discussion points I list under the readings most weeks.
Inadequate, perfunctory replies to other discussion posts. No cheerleading please.
Inadequate, perfunctory, overly broad, and/or unfocused question.
Writing mechanics problems. Edit yourself before posting.
Padding – to include one-sentence paragraphs, wide margins, extra spaces between paragraphs, and long quotes from readings to fill space.
Un evidenced assertions that begin with "In my opinion ... ." or some variant of this.

10 points for essay and 10 points for at least two substantive replies: Totaled at end
Due at 5 a.m. Mondays

A Final Research Paper

The paper - a Systematic Literature Review – will normally consist of five sections, each of which we will discuss as we go along (See: Key to Research Papers):

1. Introduction (or rationale for why your chosen topic is important to study)
2. Literature review (all relevant literature that informs your topic to include theoretical frameworks)
3. Methodology (or how you conducted the study)
4. Results (or study findings)
5. Discussion / Conclusion (connection with previous research/ theory; weaknesses or limitations; future research)
This paper will be completed in teams of two with my participation as third party.
See Appendix 1 for grading rubric

Lit Review Synthesis Matrix
You will employ the Matrix Method to conduct a Systematic Literature Review Research Paper that answers a focused research question and identifies the evidence to answer that question. Once you identify a manageable research topic that has significance for study, you will need to appraise and synthesize all high-quality research evidence (literature) relevant to your chosen topic. As you can tell from paper examples below, there are several ways of doing these. You can employ the method that seems most appropriate to your topic. Systematic literature reviews offer a reliable, transparent, explicit, and reproducible way of collating, appraising, analyzing, and interpreting existing evidence. Knowing how to conduct a systematic review offers numerous professional benefits including the ability to critically search for, appraise, and synthesize evidence.

50 points for Matrix from which you write your Systematic Literature Review Research Paper

Final Version Due 11:55 p.m. Dec. 3

About systematic reviews:
This form consists of an overview of existing evidence pertinent to a clearly formulated research question, which uses pre-specified and standardized methods to identify and critically appraise relevant research, and to collect, report, and analyze data from the studies that are included in the review. Typically it focuses on a very specific empirical question, often posed in a cause-and-effect form, such as "To what extent does A contribute to B?" See more at https://libraryguides.missouri.edu/j8000/literaturereview

"A research literature review is a systematic, explicit, and reproducible method for identifying, evaluating, and synthesizing the existing body of completed and recorded work produced by researchers, scholars, and practitioners.”

Examples of systematic literature reviews:

See Appendix 2 for Possible Ideas for a Systematic Literature Review

See Appendix 3 for Writing and Research resources

Paper Proposal
Discuss with me during Writing/Research Time a well-thought-out paper idea for vetting.
Post to canvas a paper proposal and a copy of your research matrix. Teams of 2 will write a 3- to 4-page paper proposal. It should include a brief summary of the paper you want to write, a Research Matrix with at least 10 scholarly articles relevant to your topic, the Research Question(s) you want to answer, a brief tentative outline of the proposed paper, and a description of your method – that is how you plan to answer the question(s) related to your topic. Follow this outline of the elements of a research proposal for your own proposal: http://www.users.drew.edu/sjamieso/Resources/Proposal.pdf

100 points
Due 11 a.m. Sept. 17

Proposal Presentation
For the brief presentation in class (no more than 10 minutes), bring in a 1-page worksheet outlining your paper and a copy of your Research Matrix – enough for all in class. Post your presentation worksheet and any other materials you use to Canvas assignment

50 points
Due 11 a.m. Sept. 17

Brief Paper Proposal Presentations in Class Sept. 17

Introduction / Literature Review
Post to canvas the Introduction and Literature Review sections of your paper. Must include appropriate citations.

50 points
Due 11 a.m. Oct. 8

Methodology
Post to canvas the Methodology section of your paper. Must include appropriate citations.

50 points
Due 11 a.m. Oct. 22

Rough Draft of Final Paper
Post to canvas a rough draft of your paper and a copy of your research matrix to this point. This should be at least two-thirds completed by due date – at least up through the method. Must include appropriate citations. Small-group paper confabs to be scheduled. You will bring enough copies of your rough draft in so everyone in the confab has a copy. We will go over these together. I am going to set up some time to go over these with you outside of class.

100 points
Due 11 a.m. Nov. 19 / Small group paper confabs to be scheduled

Final Paper
Post to canvas a rough draft of your paper and a copy of your research matrix. Teams of 2 will write a final 15- to 20-page paper of sufficient quality for submission to the AEJMC Southeast Colloquium http://schieffercollege.tcu.edu/aejmc/papers-aejmc/

Note: All writing is an argument to one degree or another. And arguments require evidence – not airy assertions. Because the paper should be of professional quality, grammar also matters. The paper should have a minimum of 15 citations from academic journals and other media sources. This cite is helpful: Purdue Online Writing Lab (OWL) Research and Citation Resources https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/section/2/. Go to Appendix 1 for Research Paper Grading Rubric.

Objective: The purpose of this paper is to hone:
(1) Your skills at formulating your thoughts around a focused piece of writing.
(2) Your skills at researching a topic.
(3) Your skills at writing concisely and with clarity.

100 points
Due 11:55 p.m. Dec. 3

Final Paper Presentation
A Scholar-to-Scholar Poster Presentation of Your Paper: The presentation should focus on the results of your study and the implications for research and practice. You will need to be prepared for questions from your audience so preparation is the key and practice is a must.

We will make the classroom into a conference hall and you will offer a brief poster presentation of your research — about 10 to 15 minutes. What does this involve? See this link about posters from AEJMC. (Note, the poster is done on a Powerpoint slide and then printed on a big printer: For this class, I don't want you to spend the money on a poster, so just do the slide and send me a version on email attachment by Sunday before the last class. Include slide with your paper when you submit to Canvas. Be sure to have access to it for your presentation.

See How to Make a Poster Using PowerPoint http://library.nymc.edu/access/create_PPposter.cfm (Here is some information on where you can have posters printed on UF campus if you ever need to do so: https://print.at.ufl.edu/computing-lab-services/print-and-plot-tips-and-requirements/ and here are some Poster Samples & Templates from UF Printing Service https://print.at.ufl.edu/computing-lab-services/poster-samples-templates/

In Class:
✓ Quiz & Conversation, Annotation Worksheets & Brief Lecture

Annotation worksheets. I will hand out a section of a reading and in groups you will annotate the heck out of it: Define keywords, identify how those words connect with other parts of the reading or other readings, consider whether they point to things outside the reading. In short, dump anything you can think of onto the annotation sheet.

o Who was Neil Postman? http://neilpostman.org/
  o “He mistrusted entertainment, not as a situation but as a political tool; he worried that Americans’ great capacity for distraction had compromised their ability to think, and to want, for themselves. He resented the tyranny of the lol.”
  o Regarding Postman’s concerns with fragmentation, here is a quote from the Danish philosopher Soren Kierkegaard: “The daily press is the evil principle of the modern world, and time will only serve to disclose this fact with greater and greater clearness. The capacity of the newspaper for degeneration is sophistically without limit, since it can always sink lower and lower in its choice of readers. At last it will stir up all those dregs of humanity which no state or government can control.”
  o “In his essay, The Present Age, Kierkegaard claimed that his age was characterized by reflection and curiosity. People took an interest in everything but were not committed to anything. He attributed this growing cultivation of curiosity and the consequent failure to distinguish the important from the trivial to the Press. Its new massive distribution of desituated information, he held, was making every sort of information immediately available to anyone thereby producing an anonymous, detached spectator. He wrote in his Journal: "...here ... are the two most dreadful calamities which really are the principle powers of impersonality--the press and anonymity" (Journals and Papers Vol. 2, p. 480). Kierkegaard thought that, thanks to these powers, the Press would complete the leveling of qualitative distinctions, distinctions of worthiness, that had been going on in the West since the Enlightenment.” – Hubert L. Writing Advice:
“When distant and unfamiliar and complex things are communicated to great masses of people, the truth suffers a considerable and often a radical distortion. The complex is made over into the simple, the hypothetical into the dogmatic, and the relative into an absolute.”

~Walter Lippmann

“There can be no public without full publicity in respect to all consequences which concern it. Whatever obstructs and restricts publicity, limits and distorts public opinion and checks and distorts thinking on social affairs. Without freedom of expression, not even methods of social inquiry can be developed. For tools can be evolved and perfected only in operation; in application to observing, reporting and organizing actual subject-matter; and this application cannot occur save through free and systematic communication.”

~John Dewey

The Problem of Knowledge: Lippmann & Dewey

  (2 pages with summary)

Class 5 - Oct. 1
The Problem of Knowledge: Public Opinion & The Function of News

“I will add, that the man who never looks into a newspaper is better informed than he who reads them; inasmuch as he who knows nothing is nearer to truth than he whose mind is filled with falsehoods & errors. He who reads nothing will still learn the great facts, and the details are all false.”

~Thomas Jefferson

- AOTD: Chapter 3 – Typographic America
  - Who Was James Carey? https://pewrsr.ch/2jbjNLA
- “The Man Who Knew Too Little: The most ignorant man in America knows that Donald Trump is president — but that’s about it. Living a liberal fantasy is complicated,” by Sam Dolnick https://nyti.ms/2I7fvAB (6 pages)

Optional

- Theories of public opinion https://digitalcommons.unl.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1251&context=sociologyfacpub
- “Liberty and the News,” by Walter Lippmann Read essay beginning on Page 69 https://archive.org/details/libertynews00lippuoft From contemporary publisher’s abstract of book: “This little gem of a book, which first appeared in 1920, was written in Walter Lippmann’s thirtieth year. He was still full of the passionate faith in democracy that was evident in his writings before the First World War. From today’s point of view, Lippmann’s argument seems unusually prescient. He was troubled by distortions in newspaper journalism, but was also deeply aware of the need to protect a free press. Lippmann believed that toleration of alternative beliefs was essential to maintaining the vitality of democracy. Liberty and the News is a key transitional work in the corpus of Lippmann’s writings. For it is here that he proposes that public opinion is largely a response not to truths but rather to a “pseudo-environment” which exists between people and the external world. Lippmann was worried that if the beliefs that get exchanged between people are hollow, and bear only a purely accidental relationship to the world as it truly is, then the entire case for democracy is in danger of having been built on sand. His concerns remain very much alive and important.” https://amzn.to/2uxlKf8

Hierarchy of Influences Model

Levels of analysis approach: Factors affecting media content can be usefully classified at different levels of analysis, leading us to organize them into a model. The hierarchy of influences model organizes what have been laid out as various theoretical perspectives on the shaping of media content, including as follows the suggested categories of Gans (1979) and Gitlin (1980).

1. Content is influenced by media workers’ socialization and attitudes. This is a communicator-centered approach, emphasizing the psychological factors impinging on an individual’s work: professional, personal, and political.
2. Content is influenced by media organizations and routines. This approach argues that content emerges directly from the nature of how media work is organized. The organizational routines within which an individual operates form a structure, constraining action while also enabling it.
3. Content is influenced by other social institutions and forces. This approach finds the major impact on content lying external to organizations and the communicator: economic, political, and cultural forces. Audience pressures can be found in the “market” explanation of “giving the public what it wants.”
4. Content is a function of ideological positions and maintains the status quo. The so-called hegemony approach locates the major influence on media content as the pressures to support the status quo, to support the interests of those in power in society.

6. After it was purchased by Alibaba, some say the South China Morning Post is ‘pioneering a new form of propaganda’ by producing positive stories about China (New York Times) Alibaba purchased The South China Morning Post two years ago. With that purchase came a new mission for the Post, NYT’s Javier C. Hernandez writes: “Improving China’s image overseas and combating what it sees as anti-Chinese bias in the foreign media.” Hernandez writes: “Every day, the Post churns out dozens of articles about China, many of which seek to present a more positive view of the country. As it does, critics say it is moving away from independent journalism and pioneering a new form of propaganda. Alibaba, which has been open from the start about its ambitions for the newspaper, envisions a day when The Post is the dominant news organization in the world, riding the momentum of China’s rise as a superpower.” Earlier: Last summer, Quartz examined how Alibaba was changing the South China Morning Post, including its mission to counter the “negative” portrayals of China in Western media (Quartz)

Optional Readings

✓ Journalism Research and The Hierarchy of Influences Model: A Global Perspective,” by Stephen D. Reese
“Understanding how non-journalists see the news media is an essential step in rebuilding public trust. ... The idea that many citizens feel like David to the news media’s Goliath may be hard for journalists to stomach or believe. It is the exact opposite of how journalists normally think of themselves. If news institutions want to regain long-waning public trust, they need to address the widespread perception that the news media is more interested in serving itself than the public. They would do well to highlight not just their accuracy, but their care, empathy, and ability to listen to the little guy.”

~ Ruth Palmer

“The stories you are talking about are people’s lives. When we talk about stories mainstream media doesn’t cover, we’re talking about, ‘Can our people have water to drink?’ ‘My cousin got shot.’ ‘My cousin got deported,’” Sydette Harry says. “So, when you come into these communities and you use them as stories, as objects, you are literally dehumanizing them and this has been the history of journalism.”

~ Sydette Harry

“Every journalist who is not too stupid or too full of himself to notice what is going on knows that what he does is morally indefensible. He is a kind of confidence man, preying on people’s vanity, ignorance or loneliness, gaining their trust and betraying them without remorse. Like the credulous widow who wakes up one day to find the charming young man and all her savings gone, so the consenting subject of a piece of nonfiction learns—when the article or book appears—his hard lesson. Journalists justify their treachery in various ways according to their temperaments. The more pompous talk about freedom of speech and ‘the public’s right to know’; the least talented talk about Art; the seemliest murmur about earning a living.

Read for this class:

“Of course, if your dominant metaphors for thinking about politics are sports metaphors, as seems to have become the case in this country, it will be much more difficult for you to draw such lines than it would be if you thought of politics as, say, a realm of debate and ideas; or, if that is too idealistic, then as a kind of blunt but occasionally effective tool for making the world a less unlivable place. If you’re a Giants fan you don’t frequently ask yourself, do the Giants really deserve my support? Are the arguments for why I should support the Giants and not the Dodgers cogent and based in reality? You don’t really care much what the Giants are like as people, or what they think; you just stick by them because they’re your team. This is what our politics has been for some time, not a matter of ideas but a matter of identity. If you’re on the Red side you’ll forgive the Reds for things that, were they said or done by a Blue, would render you apoplectic with rage. You make your decisions and reach your evaluations not by looking to see what was done but by looking to see who did them. If I told you that a certain politician had revealed information to the Russians, or mocked a disabled person, or stored e-mails on a private server, and I asked you how you felt about that, you would not be able to answer my question without first asking, Well, who was it that did that? Was it one of our people? Or was it somebody on the other side?” ~ Troy Jollimore, “Wallace Shawn’s Late Night”

Class Evaluations

Students are expected to provide feedback on the quality of instruction in this course based on 10 criteria. These evaluations are conducted online at https://evaluations.ufl.edu. Evaluations are typically open during the last two or three weeks of the semester, but students will be given specific times when they are open. Summary results of these assessments are available to students at https://evaluations.ufl.edu/results.

ii 동문서답 East Question, West Answer

iii Journalism Research and The Hierarchy of Influences Model: A Global Perspective,” by Stephen D. Reese

iv “The media,” like “technology," is not a single tangible object, but rather an information galaxy, a vast and complex star system composed of diverse and opposing organizations, which are themselves composed of a motley group of people, each of whom are neither all good nor all bad, but mostly flawed media merchants, with individual strengths, weaknesses, biases, and blindspots. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, there are almost 200,000 Americans working for broadcast television and cable programming, 197,000 employed in digital publishing and broadcasting, 183,000 working for newspapers, 99,000 working for magazines, 86,000 in radio, and 64,000 employed in the editing and production of books. Asking survey respondents to briefly summarize their feelings about the daily work of one million strangers is asking for an impossible, and potentially meaningless, oversimplification, like, “Do you think food is too raw?” or “Is clothing red?”
