Required Textbook

Public Relations Cases, Darrell C. Hayes, Jerry A. Hendrix, Pallavi D. Jumar, 9th Edition

Course Description

Simply put, the purpose of this course is to prepare you to create a PR campaign in the future. Familiarity of how to execute a PR campaign and its elements benefit not only the PR practitioner but the business community. After all, well done PR campaigns have the ability to elect presidents, drive fundraising dollars for lesser known nonprofits, propel YouTubers into stars, and take startups to the mainstream. PR campaigns, when executed well, add business value. That said, executing a campaign today is far different than 10, five, even a couple of years ago. As the lines of traditional and social/digital media continue to blend and evolve, modern PR practitioners must learn to adapt quickly and play in both spaces. This class uncovers the fundamentals to enacting a modern PR campaign. Taught by a real-life practitioner, you'll learn best-in class and real world approaches. We'll explore how data, customer insights, digital, media buying, writing, ethics, disclosure law, traditional media relations, internal communications, multicultural marketing, opportunistic engagement, sponsorship and more fit into the campaign equation.

Prerequisite Knowledge and Skills

As a culminating course, PUR4800 will build on the foundational concepts that you have learned in prior courses. These themes include but are not limited to teaming, media outreach, social media content creation and journalistic writing. You'll apply these principals and new learnings from our lectures, guest speakers, readings and other materials presented to create a holistic and "real world" PR campaign that adds business value to a real client in a team environment.

Course Objectives

By the end of this course, students will be able to:

- Discuss the basic principles of public relations campaign planning, including research, objectives setting, strategic planning, traditional and social media tactics, crisis management, evaluation, and more.
- Analyze “real world” campaigns to develop best practice standards.
- Apply high performance teaming experience to a future client or brand.
- Develop a real life strategic public relations campaign to solve a real business opportunity.

Teaching Philosophy

Teaming: Your professor is of the strong opinion that to understand PR, you must immerse yourself in the real-life application of its principals. One of which is high performance teaming. To that end, at the beginning of the semester, you will be assigned into teams. The ultimate campaign you develop and many assignments along the way in this course will be completed amongst your team. You are expected to team at a high level – dedicating yourself to the team and carrying your own weight. As such, for team assignments the grade the team receives will be the grade received for each teammate. This practice is not atypical to the real world of PR where the performance of the campaign is contingent on the collective performance of the team. I encourage you to meet regularly with your team to discuss the lessons learned and potential implications for your campaign. I have baked into the schedule opportunities for you to connect with your team however I encourage you to set up a cadence of regular touch bases. The reason you have received your campaign assignment at the beginning of the course is to help you consider how each lesson could potentially apply to your campaign.

Hearing from real life practitioners: In addition, I have arranged for several guests to join the class to reinforce the lessons learned. So, you'll hear from some of my fellow practitioners (and friends - this is a business of relationships after all!) who are in the trenches today testing, learning and discovering new ways to engage customers. I expect you to put the lessons you learn from the guest speakers into practice as you build your own PR campaign.

Case Analysis: Cases and real life examples that clearly illustrate the principals we discuss in our lectures and from your reading will serve as a foundation for you to apply to your PR campaign.

Instructional Methods

Our class will combine discussions, lectures, assignments, guest speakers, case analysis and final campaign projects. Many of your assignments will be completed in your assigned team as previously mentioned. All modules will include an intro video. Due to changes to the course, modifications may be announced via update videos modifying language articulated in the intro videos.

Attendance Policy

As this is an online course, you are expected to exhibit a high level of self-discipline. Each module was designed for completion on a week-by-week basis (with few exceptions of assignments from previous modules due in forthcoming module weeks). During week 1, I recommended you peruse each module in e-Learning to familiarize yourself with deliverables, number of lectures and readings. An assignment breakdown follows however if you have a particular way you like to organize your workload, I encourage you to set up these systems of organization in week one so you can keep track of your deliverables. Each module and its respective components have been broken down by week in e-Learning inclusive of assigned readings, lectures, guest lectures and assignments. Please complete all modules within their respective weeks and by their listed deadlines. To be clear, you are expected to complete all assignments by their stated due date. Additionally, I expect you to complete the readings in advance of watching the lectures.

Quiz Policy

There is 1 quiz which will go toward your assignment grade. The case assignment will be treated as your final exam. The rationale behind this is that every lesson should culminate in an understanding of what makes a PR campaign best in class versus what doesn't. Your examination of a real campaign is a good way to assess your understanding of these standards.

Make-Up Policy

Make up assignments or extended deadlines will be assessed on a case-by-case basis. Reach out to me directly if you require such an accommodation. I understand things happen.

Assignment Policy

Assignments are expected to be completed by their respective listed deadlines and in your assigned team unless otherwise stated.

Class Participation Policy

A number of assignments have been clumped under the class participation category. The intent behind these assignments is largely to assess how engaged you have been in the lectures thus far and get you thinking about the lessons' application to your ultimate campaign. I am also using these assignments as checkpoints. In the event that it becomes clear you are missing the essence of the lesson, I will do my best to intervene and help provide clarity. My goal is to ensure you leave the class informed and ready to team at a high level in the context of an integrated marketing/communications campaign. If your responses along the way suggest otherwise I view these assignments as opportunities to course correct. Generally speaking though, a well thought out, substantive submission inclusive of a meaningful response (submitted on deadline) will receive full credit when it comes to assignments and class participation. I am not aiming to nit-pick on points however if you blatantly do not put forth any effort I will deduct points if only to penalize you for wasting my time on a meaningless response.

Online Course Evaluation

Students are expected to provide feedback on the quality of instruction in this course by completing online evaluations at <https://evaluations.ufl.edu>. Evaluations are typically open during the last two or three weeks of the semesters, but students will be given specific times when they are open. Summary results of these assessments are available to students at <https://evaluations.ufl.edu/results>.
