Course Overview

Late Scottish manager Bill Shankly once commented: “Some people think football is a matter of life and death. I assure you, it’s much more serious than that.” The beautiful game indeed has a profound hold on billions of people around the world. That has prompted scholars, including Franklin Foer, to argue that soccer can “explain the world.” Communicating Soccer Globally examines the most popular sport in the world from media, business and social perspectives through readings, videos, lectures, class discussion, and international speakers. We explore soccer’s global influence and how it is communicated around the world. Case studies will include nationalism during major events (World Cup, Euro, Copa América, etc.), fan support and identity, the business economics of football, and the state of women’s soccer outside of North America.

Course Objectives

1. Develop critical thinking skills in relation to the impact media have had on societies (and vice-versa) through a unique lens: soccer
2. Explain and think critically about international issues, including but not limited to the influence of media on societies, migration, the global economy, capitalism and other political systems, etc.
3. Demonstrate understanding of the careers that are available in the global sport industry
4. Demonstrate ability to generate content, including effective writing and multimedia skills, from a global perspective
5. Understand the ways in which sports journalism frames our understanding of sports.
6. Be able to critically analyze the impact of globalization on their domestic sports media industry, and have developed an understanding of the international diversity in coverage of soccer

In case of illness, the instructor should be notified in advance and a physician's note may be required. Unexcused absences will result in deductions from the students final percentage score. Requirements for class attendance and make-up exams, assignments and other work in this course are consistent with UF policies which can be found in the online catalog at:

<https://catalog.ufl.edu/ugrad/current/regulations/info/attendance.aspx>

Absences and Make-up Work

Students are expected to be in class on time and remain until the dismissal. Absences are unexcused when the professor has not been notified of an acceptable reason within 24 hours of the class meeting. When absent, please contact a fellow student to find out what was missed. You are responsible for all material covered or assigned during classes, even if you are not there. Your grade on late assignments will drop one letter grade for every day they are late.
