COURSE DESCRIPTION: In this course, we will cover the relationships between sports, athletes, media, and audience. We will focus on current (and some historical) case studies that showcase professional and ethical issues of today to discuss and analyze effects for all of those involved. We will cover the various mediums—newspapers, magazines, books, radio, TV, online, forums, blogs, and social media—in terms of their history, function, impact, and ethical implications.

COURSE STRUCTURE: The course will consist of lectures, discussion, and guest speakers.

COURSE BLOG: The blog (sportsmediaUF.wordpress.com) will serve as the central hub for course-related material. You will be required to make comments on discussions there. Because this is a public blog, you’re welcome to make your comments anonymous by using a username other than your real name (but if you do, please let me know what it is, and keep it consistent throughout the semester).

TWITTER: Though it’s not required to use Twitter for this class, I will often tag posts or comments with #SportsMediaUF. If you’d like to weigh in or see something relevant to class, please feel free to use that hashtag when posting on Twitter.
GRADING: You can earn up to 500 points for the semester. Details of assignments below.

- 100 points: 25 Blog Comments
- 150 points: Case Study Presentation
- 50 points: Attendance/Participation
- 200 points: Final Project

BLOG COMMENTS: On the class blog, I will post discussion prompts based on reading, class, or current events. You do not have to comment on everything, but you do need to comment on 25 posts throughout the semester (with a minimum of three for every week). Your comments only need to be a few sentences, but they should be thoughtful, insightful, and further the conversation. You will earn up to 4 points for every post. (Going over 25 does not count as extra-credit.)

ATTENDANCE/PARTICIPATION: You are expected to attend every class and participate in discussions. Documented medical excuses and religious holidays will be accepted as excused absences.

CASE STUDY: You will present a 45-minute case study to the class. You must have your idea approved (obviously, no duplication with any of the topics listed below, or with your own final project). You may choose to focus on an individual, a team, a league, a news event, a policy, an issue, etc..., but the focus on sports media should be clear, and it should involve some gray areas in ethics/principles that are relevant for discussion. Each case study presentation should include:
- Facts/background/timeline about the case,
- Scope of criticism/analysis from outside sources,
- Key media principles and issues raised by the case,
- Questions for discussion, and
- References at the end.

Please submit an electronic and printed copy of your presentation materials. Presentations will be on 6/5 and 6/6. How you will be graded:

- 25 points: Quality/originality of idea
- 25 points: Quality of presentation: Are slides/references useful and helpful?
- 75 points: Content of presentation: Have you presented relevant facts about the case, background/context, critiques/analysis from independent sources? Do we have a thorough understanding of the issue?
- 25 points: Did you lead a thoughtful and relevant discussion?
FINAL PROJECT: I want you to be able to work on a project that is most relevant to your career and educational goals. I am flexible and want you to come out of the class with something that is either an examination or practice of sports media. For example, you could do another case study as a paper. You could also do a piece of sports media (such as a long-form video or written story). Each project should have the approximate weight of a 20-page paper, and each grading rubric will be customized for the student. All ideas must be approved by May 23 (we can spend some time in class discussing ideas). Due Wednesday, 6/19, at start of class.
