

Specialize in Health Communication

Graduate students in the College of Journalism and Communications at the University of Florida benefit from learning health communication on a medical campus and being in walking distance to the Health Sciences Center, College of Nursing, Cancer Center, UF Health Shands Hospital, and more! Students will have the ability to take courses in health communication utilizing theories stemming from interpersonal, mediated, and technological perspectives from renowned, federally funded researchers.

See below for a sample of the courses being offered:

Health & Science Writing

Section: MMC 6936

Instructor: Ted Spiker

Contact: tspiker@jou.ufl.edu

Grant Writing

Section: MMC 6936

Instructor: Yulia Strekalova

Contact: yulias@ufl.edu

Mass Media & Health

Section: MMC 6417

Instructor: Kim Walsh-Childers

Contact: kwchilders@jou.ufl.edu

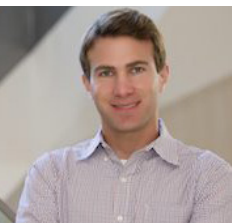

Communication in Healthcare & Systematic Review Methods

Section: MMC 6936

Instructor: Carma Bylund

Contact: carma.bylund@ufl.edu

eHealth: Digital Communication in Health Care

Section: MMC 6936

Instructor: Jordan Alpert

Contact: jordan.alpert@ufl.edu

Translational Health & Science Communication

Section: MMC 6936

Instructor: Janice Krieger

Contact: janicekrieger@ufl.edu

Science Health Communication

Section: MMC 6409

Instructor: Debbie Treise

Contact: dtreise@jou.ufl.edu

Family and Health Communication & Advanced Qualitative Methods

Section: MMC 6936

Instructor: Carla Fisher

Contact: carlafisher@ufl.edu

Scan here to view full course descriptions or to learn more about Health Communication!

